The Union League Club of Chicago was the setting for an alumni reception that officially kicked-off the Campaign for the School of Law. The meeting, which was held on September 9th, was hosted by national chairman Herbert F. Stride, '57, and featured a special multi-media presentation on the School of Law. Dean Alfred Meyer, '50, Professor Louis Bartelt, '47, and Professor Charles Gromley were on hand representing the School of Law along with Don Huiner, the school's development director.

Alumni who attended represented classes from five decades, all of whom are currently practicing in the greater Chicago-land area.

The Chicago reception was the first of many such meetings which will be conducted in key locations throughout the country. The goal of the campaign is to raise the necessary funds for the new School of Law Center which will be erected on the Heritage Park Campus.

Serving as co-chairmen in the campaign are George P. Mallers, '55, of Ft. Wayne and Glenn J. Tabor, '58, of Valparaiso.

Additional alumni volunteers have been recruited to work in each of the individual area campaigns.

Dean Alfred Meyer, '50, is pictured with national chairman, Herbert F. Stride, '57.

Ronald Buikema, '64, of South Holland, Illinois, takes time to examine the model of the new School of Law Center. Donald Kempster, '76, is pictured in the background.

Among the guests at the Chicago reception are Donald Kempster, '76 (left) and Lawrence Grudzien, '75. Both men practice in Chicago's Loop.
The Life of the Law School

Dear Alumnus,

Ten years ago, in a letter to the alumni, I inserted the word "school" in Justice Holmes' famous aphorism as follows: "The life of the law [school] has not been logic: it has been experience." Ten years later, logic remains a loser in our midst. The life here is lively, but logical it isn't. For example, it is not logical to conclude that Valpo is some (outstanding) law school from the following syllogism: Some law schools have law students; Valpo has law students; Valpo is some law school. According to our infamous resident logician, Brucius Bernerius, the illogic of this syllogism is known as the fallacy of equivocation, that is, the repetitive use of the word "some" to express two different meanings. Whatever the merits of this rather sterile word exercise, I would like to attempt to persuade you that Valpo has become some law school. In so doing, I risk stating the obvious at best (since all of you know this already) and, at worst, insulting you (since the school obviously was better when you were here).

The old complaint: "When I said I went to Valpo, the interviewer asked, 'Where's Valpo?" When this conversation took place in Kouts, you knew that you had not gone to a school which had become a household word. Poor man's Harvard, indeed! Well, I can tell you where Valpo is today. Its 1800 alumni are everywhere: in the judiciary; in federal and state judicial clerkships, in the law firm citadels of power and prestige in such places as Washington, Chicago, and New York City; in top level offices of major corporations; in law school faculties in California, Illinois, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, and Texas; in an international law firm with offices in Hong Kong; and in the countless law offices and businesses throughout the country where the rest of you form the backbone of the legal profession. In my earlier tenure as a dean, I did not risk omitting anyone when I "name-dropped" alumni. I wouldn't dare attempt it today. Where's Valpo? We're all over the map.

The increasing recognition accorded our institution is not an unmixed blessing to those of us who recall the halcyon days of the past. The "life of the law school" then was smaller, simpler, and seemingly more satisfying in the personal relationships engendered in a community where everyone knew everyone. Nor need we apologize for the legal education received from such teachers as Bowman, Morland, Berry, Savage, Wehling, Jox and Moll. They instilled in us a love for the law, a love for the life of the mind, and a love for Valpo. "There were giants in those days!" But, "the times, they are a'changing." And the past cannot serve as a model for the future. In our current campaign we are seeking to provide the faculty and students with a facility and a level of resources which will ensure that the life of the law school will be an experience of professional vitality and excellence. One may ask why a building built in the early 1960's and expanded with a library wing in the mid-1970's is already inadequate for legal education. This letter is not the proper context for extended discussion of Wseemann Hall's inadequacies. However, excerpts from the 1979 Recommendations of the ABA's Task Force on Lawyer Competency: The Role of the Law Schools describe the curricular job that needs to be done:

"...In addition to being able to analyze legal problems and do legal research, a competent lawyer must be able effectively to write, communicate orally, gather facts, interview, counsel, and negotiate. ... Law schools should provide every student at least one rigorous legal writing experience in each year of law study. They should provide all students instruction in such fundamental skills as: oral communication, interviewing, counseling, and negotiation. Law Schools should also offer instruction in litigation skills to all students desiring it... Law schools and law teachers should utilize small classes as opportunities for individualized instruction in fundamental lawyer skills... Since lawyers today commonly work in teams or in organizations, law schools should encourage more cooperative law student work... Law schools and law teachers should develop and use more comprehensive methods of measuring law student performance than the typical end-of-the-term examination. Students should be given detailed critiques of their performance... Law schools should experiment with schedules that provide opportunity for periods of intensive instruction in fundamental lawyer skills."

A building with one courtroom, two classrooms, and one seminar room is quite obviously inadequate to accomplish the indicated mission. Weesemann Hall served well the age of legal education characterized in the main by six semesters of courses taught by similar pedagogies, but it can no longer accommodate the interests and needs of increasing emphases on clinical, small-group, and other diversified instructional techniques.

"So, you ask, "what else is new? Rattling the tin cup again." Yes, the cup may be tin, but it's the rattle (ring!) of gold that we want to—must—hear if we are to build a facility conducive to the needs of the future. These needs are being explained to alumni throughout the country at local and regional meetings coordinated by Don Huiner, our Director of Development. We are told that "the times" are not right for a fund drive. But we cannot afford to be selective about the times. Law schools "exploded" during the 1960's and 1970's as enrollments mushroomed, and all schools—old, new, accredited and unaccredited—operated at capacity or beyond. Schools proudly proclaimed their high admissions standards in terms of students' college grades and test scores. In fact, high admission standards were a by-product of the times rather than an educational judgment about the intellectual requirements necessary for the successful study of law. With ten to fifteen applicants vying for each available spot in the class, (our peak applicant pool was over 1500), "selective" admissions policies became a necessity, not a luxury. But as the applicant pool shrinks (next year, there will be fewer twenty-three year olds) and as talk of an overcrowded legal profession in-

Dear Alumni:

This is my third letter to you as alumni association president and our third news bulletin of the year, meeting our stated goal of three such communications per year.

Another academic year has begun at the law school which is now under the able leadership of Prof. Al Meyer, an outstanding teacher of the law (and classmate of mine), as interim Dean. We look forward to working with Dean Meyer for the advancement of the alumni association and the law school.

Significant achievements have been made in the area of placement. Through the efforts of the alumni association, several major metropolitan law firms have agreed to conduct on-campus interviews of students. We hope to make further gains in this regard.

Again, I remind you of the plans for the new law school and the need for your support. Also, I urge each of you to become a dues-paying member of the alumni association in order that we may be able financially to strengthen our efforts and increase the activities of the association.

Best personal regards to all.

fluences career choices, it is safe to predict that applicants who, a few years ago, were inadmissible will once again be "acceptable". And the weak will perish as law school Darwinism takes its toll. Survival in the 1980's would be an ambitious objective. Excellence in the 1980's is our target. The time is now because the need is now. The school that builds today will succeed tomorrow. Where's Valpo? Your assistance is of critical importance as we strive to place it in the front ranks of legal education.

Sincerely,

Alfred W. Meyer

Placement News
Mrs. Gail Peshel

I have been Placement Director for a little over three months and already have come to appreciate greatly the support of the alumni of the School of Law. I have yet to write a letter or place a phone call asking for assistance and not receive tremendous support.

Many changes have occurred in the Placement Office over the summer. The law school has installed a micro-computer which is used for word-processing, office management, admissions, scheduling classes, maintaining student files, law library office management, and, most significantly from my standpoint, for placement. Students are able to send cover letters and resumes to many law firms by using the word-processing component of the computer. Already we have developed a large file of firm names and addresses throughout the country.

To date, graduates of the School of Law have been very successful in finding positions. Recent statistics show a success rate which is well within the national average. Within six months of passing the bar, over 90 percent of our graduates find law-related jobs. We are proud of these statistics, but are striving toward 100 percent.

To this end, I seek your assistance. Although we have the word-processing equipment, which certainly assists students in canvassing large areas, it is in many ways a "shot in the dark," as many of the firms to which a letter is sent do not even have an opening. That is where your help is needed. If you know of a position in a firm in your area, or if your firm is looking for an attorney, please contact me. If you are looking for a person with specific qualifications or experience, I will be pleased to make the position, with qualifications, known to our students.

Alternatively, if you are able to interview on campus, I would be delighted to make arrangements for that. Already this year we have had firms from Michigan, Indianapolis, South Bend and Chicago interview at the School and invite you to do the same.

Please advise me if there is any way that the Placement Office can assist you. Your support has been greatly appreciated and I look forward to hearing about placement opportunities from you.

Representing classes from the forties and thirties are Richard Bodenstab, '49 (left), and Walter Christopher, '36. Both men practice in Chicago.
School Profile
CURTIS W. CICHOWSKI
Director of Law Admissions
Class of 1981

Valparaiso University School of Law is continuing to grow as a national law school which provides legal education to a diverse group of students from all corners of the nation. This year's first year class, the class of 1985, reflects this trend.

The 136 first year students are residents of fourteen states and three foreign countries. Fifty-four undergraduate universities are represented and credentials show degrees earned in thirty-eight different undergraduate majors. The undergraduate schools which are represented extend from New York to Washington, and from Wisconsin to Texas. Included are such schools as Luther, Penn State, Calvin, Notre Dame, DePaul, University of Denver, University of Michigan, Indiana University and Harvard.

The profile of the class includes 92 men and 44 women. Minorities constitute 12% of the class. There are seven students who hold earned doctorate degrees (including our five Law Fellows), and eighteen other students who have completed graduate studies in business, education, history, English, art, and criminal justice.

Each year, admission to the law school becomes increasingly competitive. However, maintaining our high standards is not an easy task. Although the number of applicants nation-wide is on the rise, many of those follow the national migration and enroll in law schools located in the "sunbelt." Consequently, we must look beyond the Midwest to attract, and enroll, a class which is diverse and qualified.

The benefits of being a school that draws from every corner of this nation are clear. The greater our exposure, the greater our opportunity to obtain qualified students. Additionally, after graduation, those students who choose to return to their home regions provide an expanded alumni and thereby serve to further expand the reputation of the law school.

Clearly, this expanded base of loyal alumni is one of our most valuable resources. It is the alumni who exemplify the quality of the education which they received. It is the alumni who are the steadfast supporters of the School. In many practical ways, it is also the alumni who assist with the ongoing program.

This can be done in several ways. You can be our eyes and ears throughout the country, notifying the school of any individual who you feel is qualified for admission to the School of Law. Additionally, you can provide general information to students or pre-law advisors at colleges or universities in your area about the School of Law. Although we are able to visit a few of the several hundred colleges and universities throughout the country, we do not have the resources to travel to places such as Walla Walla, Washington, or to Haines City, Florida, etc., but we do have alumni in those areas.

With the aid of the alumni, we can advance our national reputation. If you know of qualified college students in your area who will be seeking admission to law school in the near future, please advise the School of Law of that student's name and address. Or, if you are willing to take an afternoon off to talk to prospective students or pre-law advisors at a local college or university, please notify us and we will be more than happy to provide you with literature and to make all necessary arrangements for your visit.

We appreciate our alumni and value your assistance. We have been successful in our initial push for greater diversity, and much of the credit goes to alumni who have helped. Your increased support is solicited and encouraged.

Faculty News & Notes
ADMINISTRATIVE CHANGES: As of July 1, 1982, Curtis W. Cichowski (’81) is the Director of Admissions. Mr. Cichowski received his B.A. degree from Carroll College, Waukesha, Wisconsin, in 1976 and his J.D. degree from Valparaiso University School of Law in 1981. While a student, he was a member of the Law Review staff. After gaining admission to the Indiana State Bar in February, 1981, he served as an associate attorney for the law firm of Stults, Custer, Kutansky, and McClean, in Valparaiso. This summer, Gail Peshel began her appointment as Director of Law Placement and has focused on job development, information dissemination, career counseling, and student services. Before coming to the law school, Mrs. Peskel served as office manager for a local law firm and also worked for a Valparaiso corporation. Mrs. Peskel studied at Ball State University and Indiana University. She has been an active member in the Indiana Association of Legal Administrators.

NEW FACULTY: Professor Alex Y. Seita is Visiting Assistant Professor of Law for this academic year. Prior to coming to Valparaiso, he was at the University of Puget Sound where he was a Visiting Professor. He earned his B.S. in engineering from the California Institute of Technology in 1973, his J.D. and M.B.A. from Stanford University in 1976 and 1980, respectively. Between receiving his law and business degrees, he served as a law clerk to Chief Justice William S. Richardson of the Hawaii Supreme Court and worked as an attorney for the Bank of America, specializing in commercial transactions. He has served as a consultant for Stanford Business School and the computers division of NASA’s Ames Research Center as well as instructing in the Linguistics Department at Stanford. Professor Seita will be teaching Business Associations, Securities Regulation, and U.C.C.

Visiting Assistant Librarian Tim Joseph Watts comes to us from the Library Science program at Indiana University-Bloomington where he completed his M.L.S. degree. He holds two other Masters degrees, one in American History, received from Pittsburg State University in 1979, the other in European History, received from Notre Dame in the summer of 1981. He will be assisting with reference services and will be supervising student aides and activities of the circulation/reserve desk.

Instructor of the first-year legal writing course is Kenneth Rathert who received both his B.A. degree (1970) and his J.D. degree (1976) from Valparaiso University. Upon completion of his legal education and admission to the Michigan bar, Mr. Rathert accepted a position as a staff attorney with the Senior Citizens Law Center, Legal Services of Eastern Michigan. In 1978 he became a Managing Attorney for the Legal Services Organization, continuing to assure that necessary legal aid be afforded the less advantaged. Since October of 1981, Mr. Rathert has been involved in the Law School's legal internship program as a supervising attorney, working within the federal program, Project Justice and Equality.

(1982). On September 15, Prof. Berner spoke to Indiana judges on criminal procedure as part of the annual Judicial Conference at the Indiana Judicial Center at the Merrillville Holiday Inn.

Professor Paul Brietzke researched public policy and antitrust law this summer at Sterling Law Library (Yale) and the Library of Congress in preparation for his seminar on public policy and a forthcoming article on the same topic. He has also written an article entitled "Law and Development Administration" forthcoming in 26 (2) Harvard L. Rev. (Dec. 1982).

Professor Paul Cox has written an article "A Reexamination of the Role of Employer Motive Under Sections 8(a) (1) and 8(a) (3) of the National Labor Relations Act." 5 U. Puget Sound L. Rev. 161 (1982).

Professor Bert Goodwin spent most of the summer as a student again, studying the historical development of American law with Stanford's Professor Lawrence M. Friedman. One of a dozen law teachers from across the country selected to participate, under the sponsorship of the National Endowment for the Humanities, Professor Goodwin reports that he has returned brimming with ideas for expanding the curriculum, beginning with a new seminar this year on advanced topics in legal history. Professor Linda Long also attended a number of the Stanford sessions.

Professor Jack A. Hiller has returned from a six-week study of law and development projects in Senegal, Kenya and Malawi and one week in Britain. On September 29th he shared his views on current problems in Africa with the campus community in a lecture in the Chapel undercroft. Since his return he has been actively engaged in efforts here and abroad to seek the release of Kenya lawyers detained in connection with recent political repression in Kenya. Professor Hiller has also been invited to present a paper at and participate in the "First International Congress of Legal Philosophy" in LaPlata, Argentina, in October of this year. He has submitted a paper on the role of appellate judges in common law and civil law courts in the Third World.

Professor John Potts attended a meeting in August of the Committee on Standards of Tax Practice, of which he is a member, at the ABA annual meeting which was held in San Francisco. He has since been appointed to two subcommittees: Subcommittee on Lawyers Opinion on Tax Matters and Subcommittee on Self-Assessment and Specialization.

Professor Rosalie Levinson and Professor Ivan Bodensteiner have jointly written an article on current developments in civil rights and civil liberties which will be published in a forthcoming annual issue of the Chicago-Kent Law Review on current developments in Constitutional Law.

Assistant Dean Matthew P. Downs has passed the Illinois Bar Exam. On October 7 and 8 he will chair the Education Committee of the Ohio Regional Association of Law Libraries at their fall meeting in Indianapolis.
