5-3-2014

When Literacy Matters: A Study of the Impact of English and Local Language Literacy on Income in Ghana

Amanda McCullough
Valparaiso University, amanda.mccullough@valpo.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholar.valpo.edu/cus

Recommended Citation
https://scholar.valpo.edu/cus/347

This Poster Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the Office of Sponsored and Undergraduate Research at ValpoScholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in Symposium on Undergraduate Research and Creative Expression (SOURCE) by an authorized administrator of ValpoScholar. For more information, please contact a ValpoScholar staff member at scholar@valpo.edu.
When Literacy Matters: A Study of the Impact of English and Local Language Literacy on Income in Ghana

Amanda McCullough

Departmental Affiliation: Economics
College of Arts and Sciences

Ghana is a country with substantial language heterogeneity. In 2002, Ghana began a nationwide policy instituting English as the primary language of instruction in grade school. Using data from the Ghana Living Standards Survey, this paper examines the conditions (sectoral, geographic, educational attainment) in which English language literacy is, in fact, beneficial. Implementing a multinomial logit first stage to capture sector selection, this paper explores the interaction of sector and language on income in Ghana.

Information about the Author:
No information provided.

Faculty Sponsor: Dr. Sara Gundersen

Student Contact: amanda.mccullough@valpo.edu