Research Question

What musical markers does Debussy use to show early impressionism in Nuit D’etoiles (1880)?
Literature Review

- Nuit D’etoiles was Debussy’s first vocal solo piece (1880).

- Richard Taruskin and James Hepokoski have investigated Debussy’s mature Impressionism. Style elements are alternative scales; parallel chords; avoiding fifth-relations (tonic-dominant etc.) and cadences; chordal ambiguity; sensuality and a focus on color and timbre; rhythmic ambiguity (de-emphasizing meter) etc.

- Few scholars have discussed early works (1880 and before) of Debussy as path-defining for his famous Impressionist style.
What is Impressionism?

- Impressionism in music compliments Impressionism in Art. Much like Monet in his paintings, composers were conveying mood and emotion through their music.

- Oxford Music Online:
  "Impressionism: A philosophical, aesthetic and polemical term borrowed from late 19th-century French painting. [...]. The word ‘Impressionism’ did not appear in conjunction with a specific musical aesthetic until the 1880s.”
Methods

Investigating Nuit D’étoiles for standard markers of impressionism:

- Parallel chords
- Enharmonic shifts as signs of chordal ambiguity (functional ambiguity)
- Avoiding tonic-dominant relationships in favor of other, less used harmonic progressions
- Symbolism in the text; appeal to direct, immediate, physical “sensation”: scents, experience through the senses.

Music Analysis 2: Enharmonicism

Music Analysis 3: Avoiding tonic-dominant relationships in favor of other, less used harmonic progressions

• m. 17

Je rêve aux a-mours dé-funts.
Music Analysis 4: Symbolism Reference in the Text

- m. 4: Nuit (night)

- m. 10-11: parfums (perfumes)

- M. 17: rêve (dream)
Conclusion: How does Nuit D’etoiles expand our view of Impressionism?

- I have analyzed Debussy's Nuit D’etoiles for its use of standard musical markers of impressionism, specifically, the use of parallel chords, the use of enharmonicsm, and the avoidance of direct dominant to tonic harmonic progressions.
